

PACIFIC HOUSE SYDNEY, AUSTRALIA

With a passionate belief that how a space makes you feel is of paramount importance, Megan Brown crafts thoughtful interiors that are rich with warmth, light, intimacy and connectivity.

Her award-winning studio Penman Brown is renowned for creating a sense of grandeur without pretension and offering a fresh take on relaxed, contemporary living. Not adverse to adventurous choices, Megan and her team effortlessly combine softness with edginess, detail with scale, understatement with luxury, working with clients to achieve a harmonious, relaxing and elegant home which is completely unique.

With a background in fine arts and luxury brand marketing as well as interior design, and inspired by travelling and working overseas, Megan's designs are finessed and perfectly resolved. She creates a dialogue between rooms that is enhanced by continuity yet enlivened by points of difference. Custom-made features lend a bespoke quality and seamlessly integrate with practical choices and new technology for functional living.

Megan's own home, pictured in this publication, is perfectly described by the Australian Interior Design Awards team: "A gloomy beachside bungalow is transformed into a serene urban oasis deeply connected to its coastal location. Graceful volumes and tactile, softly patterned materials compliment the bold addition of an expansive, lofty glass pavilion that expertly maximises internal floor space, captures northern light and frames blue skies above towering trees." Pacific House is transformed into a functional and contemporary dwelling. And as her own home, Pacific Bungalow is a particularly personal expression – a project that represents not only Penman Brown's design ethos but also Megan and her family's lifestyle and personality.
